OBJECTIVE: Student will analyze multiple perspectives on a given issue related to course content.

PART ONE
Students will be asked to define feminism and feminist ethics in a preliminary questionnaire administered early in the course (January 26) and in a similar follow-up questionnaire at the end of the course (March 9). If students understand multiple perspectives on feminism and feminist ethics, this should be reflected in the definitions they supply. Their responses will therefore be assigned 1-3 points based on the following scale:

1. The student provided no definition or an inaccurate definition, indicating no understanding of even one perspective (for ex., "I don't know" or "Feminism is male-bashing").
2. The student provided an accurate but overly simplified/simplistic definition, indicating understanding of just one perspective (for ex., "Feminism seeks equality of the sexes").
3. The student provided definition(s) that reflect diversity of perspectives within feminism (for ex., "For some, feminism means equality between the sexes, while for others it means ending all forms of oppression").

PART TWO
In the follow-up questionnaire at the end of the course (March 9) students were asked to indicate whether their understanding of feminism and feminist ethics had changed since the start of the course. Their responses were assigned from 1-3 points based on the following scale:

1. The student reported no change or very little change in understanding of the concept.
2. The student reported some change in understanding of the concept.
3. The student reported significant change in understanding of the concept.
